

Healthmark Bringing it Home; Reshoring & Reinvigorating Supply

Healthmark Industries announced this year significant changes to their supply chain efficiency to improve the supply of products to industry partners and increase the manufacturing of major products internally.

2020, 2021, and 2022 proved a major challenge to the supply chain of healthcare products. We have all experienced supply chain challenges in our personal as well as professional lives.

To rise to the challenge of insecure supply and to dramatically improve the ability of Healthmark to supply critical products to their customers, they undertook a major project to develop new channels of supply, including manufacturing many of these products internally!

As they developed these new and alternative sources of supply, their number one goal has been to provide products that meet or exceed the specifications of the existing products. The functionality, the intended use, the specifications, and the performance are equivalent to the existing products. So, rest assured these products will meet (or perhaps even exceed) your expectations based upon your prior experience with these Healthmark products.

By bringing production in house. By bringing it closer to home. By developing alternative sources of supply, Healthmark will be an even more reliable supplier of these critical products for your medical device reprocessing needs.
